The First Kafenio of 2002 was a Great Success!

Prometheas started the New Year with a traditional KAFENIO on Friday, January 11, 2002, at the Founders Hall of St. George Church, in Bethesda, MD. Over 100 guests participated and socialized in a pleasant atmosphere until about 11 pm. The special table which displayed Greek cultural books and brochures attracted the interest of the participants. Also, Greek music was continuously playing in the background until Tessie Catsambas surprised everyone with a beautiful program of Greek songs, which she played with her guitar. Lefteris Karmires read in Greek a poem written by Mati Constantopoulos which in a humorous style captures quite accurately what Prometheas means for its members. This poem can be seen at <http://www.prometheas.org/Documents/PoemPrometheas.pdf> or at <http://www.prometheas.org/Documents/PoemPrometheas.doc>

Prometheas Celebrated The Greek Letters Day with a Lecture: The Glory of Byzantium.

On Friday, January 25, 2002, Prometheas honored the Three Hierarchs and celebrated the Greek Letters Day at St. George Greek Orthodox Church. About 200 people attended the event. The greetings, the readings by the students and the lecture were all presented in Greek. At the start of the celebration, Mr. Konstantinos Dimitraskos, the counselor for education of the Greek Embassy, briefly addressed the audience and underlined the contribution of the Three Hierarchs to the Hellenic culture and letters. The speaker was Dr. Alexandros Alexakis, associate professor of Greek Language and Literature (and Byzantinologist) at the Richard Stockton College of New Jersey. He made a historical overview of the establishment of Byzantium, its expansion, contraction and its final fall and pointed out, with specific examples and slides, the contribution of Byzantium to the Hellenic culture.

The participation of the Greek schools of the Washington Metropolitan Area with readings and recitations of poems made a very positive impression on the audience; also, the student choir of St. George sang beautifully the song "Kokkini Milia". A reception followed which included the cutting of the traditional vasilopitta of Prometheas.

Mark your calendars:

Greek novelist, DESPINA LALA CRIST will present her novel, "NOSTOS"

on Monday, February 11, 2002 - 7:00 p.m.
Politics & Prose Bookstore and Coffeehouse
5015 Connecticut Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20008

In "Nostos", a story about Anatolian Greeks, the protagonist, Maryo obeys her aged mother's command to go back in time and witness her life: "What was it that I lived, was it a dream or a nightmare?" The heroine, a young woman as yet unconscious of her own existence, embarks on the journey. She goes back to Anatolia in the beginning of the century and experiences the joys and sorrows of her mother's family life, representing the full spectrum of human action, which leads to the tragic events of war and expulsion. The novel floats back and forth in time and space as Maryo penetrates into the very cells of being. Thus, her spirit grows through the memory of her people, metaphysical realization, and her actual emotional life. The unconscious heroine achieves conscious realization, and we see her age, becoming the archetype of the wise woman.

The lyrical language of the novel reflects, in turn, the meaning of Maryo's quest, for the text -its texture ever intense, vivid, and moving-swings back and forth between tones of anguish and of ecstasy, reflecting both the tragic pain and the spiritual delight of being.
